English À .The United States will conduct its first military strike on Syrian soil in response to the horrific chemical weapons attack on Tuesday that reportedly killed more than 1,500 civilians, including 400 children. The military action, which will reportedly be overseen by U.S. Central Command, will occur in the coming days. ADVERTISEMENT “There must be consequences for the barbarous attack by the Syrian regime,” President Obama said in a statement on Wednesday. “When governments conduct these acts they will be held accountable. We are prepared to take all necessary action, and I will keep the American people posted as events warrant,” he added. In the wake of the chemical attack, which killed more than 1,400 civilians, Obama has ordered an investigation by the White House into the events of the attack. “I have also asked my team to prepare a range of options for me to choose from,” Obama said. “I will make decisions based on what’s in the best interest of the American people.” According to Al Jazeera, there are fears that Russian air defense systems could shoot down any missiles launched by the United States. U.S. officials told Reuters that the latest estimate of the death toll is more than 1,400. Syrian officials said Wednesday that more than 1,429 civilians died in the attack, with more than 30 percent of those being children. Republican leaders in both the Senate and House are sounding the alarm that the United States should use military force against Syria, but are calling on Obama to get Congressional approval.
