I try to watch it live online each night but the last two have been atrocious! I've been following it from the beginning and I have to admit that some of the acting just isn't good. I must admit that I kind of fell in love with the show even though I knew nothing about it. And it made sense to me. Plus I didn't have to worry about anything. I hope we get a winner and so does everyone here, for that matter. But I just don't understand why people couldn't get excited about a competition we're not even watching anymore. Champions of the Earth has been going for over 5 years now, and while I understand that us fans will always feel like we have a piece of the action, its time for the show to reach its end. I would rather see some of the winning teams move on and have their coaches work with that team for the next season than watch 2 or more teams lose while one team takes the prize. If Jax and Jwoww are on the runner up team, then I'm ok with it. It makes no sense for them to get a boring season where no one wins. If they are all eligible to move on, then I'd be fine with that too. I'm afraid I'm not a fan of this show anymore, unless one of the winning teams moves on. People who are more invested in the show than I

Doctors should be able to adhere to good hypertension care in order to keep this problem under control, but there are some things that can make this difficult. One of the greatest problems facing those with hypertension is the retention of data. With the medical world being so technologically advanced, this problem is only going to get worse. Data tracking is a critical part of good hypertension care, but there are a few things that can make this difficult. The first is that doctors are often stressed out, and while you can't blame them for that, if you are dealing with other issues like anxiety and stress, it can be difficult to track your data. The second is that many doctors don't have the time to hand-record data, so it is important that you do it yourself. This will help to ensure that you keep good records. It is much better to hand-record data yourself than it is to rely on some computerized software that might not work properly, or don't track time exactly, or some of the other problems that can occur when you are not paying close attention. )Predicting adolescent psychiatric hospitalization from initial encounter ratings. Although psychiatric hospitalization is commonly initiated through mandated evaluations, little is known about the predictive value of initial encounter ratings. This study examined whether initial encounter ratings, obtained by a nurse counselor at the initial screening visit, made meaningful contributions to subsequent hospitalization for adolescents. For 1,397 adolescents (4-17 years old) who were inpatients at three urban public hospitals, the main outcome measure was whether or not a child was discharged to another hospital, or to an educational, community treatment, or supportive service in the community. Data on initial encounter ratings, demographics, characteristics of the index admission, and history of child abuse were obtained from chart review. Girls and adolescents with greater psychiatric severity at the initial screening encounter were more likely to receive psychiatric hospitalization during the study period. Odds ratios ranged from 2.75 to 5.04. Initial encounter ratings made significant independent contributions to the prediction of hospitalization. The findings suggest that nurses can be effective in identifying patients needing hospitalization. 1.
